May 17, 1975

Yes, my friends. The man refuses to give up, and thus you are reading Black Hole, a zine of postal Diplomacy published every third Saturday by Douglas Reif, 67 Grosvenor Rd., Penmore, New York 14223. Subs are $7.00 and trades are quite welcome. All games are protected by DMCA. And remember, you heard it here first.

Diplomacy is a registered trademark for a game invented by Allan R. Jallanan and copyrighted by Games Research Inc., 500 Harrison Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02113. (Just thought I'd give credit where credit was due.)

I have back issues available. Issues I currently have are 1-13 (surprise) and are available for postage. Now the games...

THE DARK BLUE STAD THE LIGHT BLUE

There was an error in the adjudication of Spring 1913 moves for this game. What was listed as an English F Edi is really a dislodged English F Nth which couldn't retreat to Edi. It did retreat to Lon. Also the dislodged German A Nos retreated to Stn.

ENGLAND (Knowles): F Eng-Bre, F Lon-Eng Owns Bre, Ion (2) Even

FRANCE (Wendry): A Wal h, A Gas-Par, F Mid-Wes, F Spa(sc) S F Mid-

The French F Spa(sc) is dislodged and must retreat to Por or OTB. The supply center listing assumes the former. If the French retreat F Spa(sc)-OTB then the French still have a removal to make but the Italians will retain Por and thus have a build. Clear? I thought not, but that's tough. Winter 1913 builds/removals are due immediately. Spring 1914 moves are due 7:30 PM, Thursday, June 5, 1975. They may be made conditional on the directions of the retreat, builds, removals, etc.

By the way, to quash a rumor Steve Bender is still in charge of Italy.

In case you hadn't noticed, I have a very liberal subbing policy. Every subscriber in a game receives the issues free of charge. I do ask that you keep me informed of who receives them. This Underlined moves fail. Since Steve Harvey failed to send moves for Germany Mark Zimmerman takes over play for that country. A thank you goes out to Roy Thomas for stand-by moves for Russia. Winter 1901 builds are due 7:30 PM, Thursday, June 5, 1975. I'm still working on a Boardman number so keep using the designation TPI 175.

Royal Rights Dept.

A federal judge said he was "outraged" to find that trustees of a $3.75 million fund to promote sex equality in the world's largest bank were using the money to send women on African safaris and to French cooking schools. "I am absolutely flabbergasted," said U.S. District Judge Charles B. Renfrew. The program was set up by independent trustees to help women employees of the Bank of America achieve higher status positions.

Judge Renfrew told attorneys for the trustees to halt the practice of using funds for such things as Caribbean junkets. He cited the use of a $2500 award to Liliane Katz to visit the wine countries of Europe and take a week-long cooking course at the Cordon Bleu school in London. Another woman was granted $1400 to go on a six-week tour of colorful America with stops at New York and Washington. Judge Renfrew said the women with the greatest ability and skill in filling out applications were awarded the 17 "travel grants." "The very women you are saying to have are not qualified," Bureaucrat at Work: Dept.

Jubal Hale admitted he's a bureaucrat with little to do. So he spends his working hours reading and listening to Beethoven in his office. Mr. Hale said it's not that he doesn't try to earn his $10,693 a year salary as executive secretary of the Federal Metal-Mineral Safety Board of Review. It's just that the board has never had had anything to review in its four years.

Mr. Hale was contacted by a reporter after Rep. Ken Hechler (D-W.Va.) charged in a House Appropriations Subcommittee meeting that the board was "a totally useless, toothless and do-less government agency which has never earned its pay." Rep. Hechler called for the board to be abolished. Mr. Hale said he doubted any objections would come from his office if Congress did just that. "We have been extremely candid with Congress," Mr. Hale said. "Our annual reports are clear and concise. We have had no cases."

The five member board was set up to hear appeals from non-coal mine operators ordered to shut down by the Mining Enforcement & Safety Administration (MESA) as unsafe. A MESA spokesman expressed surprise that the board was still in operation. "I thought it had been abolished some time ago," he said.

There were 1993 closure orders last year but not one was appealed to Mr. Hale's board. Rep. Hechler said that mine operators have another avenue of appeal through the Interior secretary.

He described a trip to the board's offices last week. "The door was open, the telephone was off the hook, and nobody was around," said the congressman. "The coffee-making equipment was elaborate. A large stereo set was in the office with Beethoven records stacked high." Mr. Hale said he was visiting the Interior Department and the secretary was home sick when Rep. Hechler visited, so no one was running the office. He did not dispute Rep. Hechler's description.

Ring

It seems to me that it's been a long time since I last played the pocket harmonica. Scott Rosenberg is the publisher as well as one of the four editors of this excellently reproduced zine. Scott has no games opened currently, but is desperately looking for currency at the rate of 3/$2.00. Featured in the most recent issue is some fine controversy with Robert Sacks. Next issue is going to be a special poetry issue, with a wandering of Dante's Divine Comedy to be included. Scott solicits any poetry (haiku-like) you may have personally written. See the mailing list for Scott's address.

AMERICAN PIE
by Len Jool

How many times have you said, "It's as American as apple pie," without realizing that it made you sound like an idiot? The reason people giggle up their sleeves when you use that expression is that apple pie is not really American at all! Thus you might as well say, "It's as American as sauerbraten mit kartoffelklossen." To atone for your former ignorance, you should memorize the following historical facts about apple pie, extracted from A. Malode's monumental Histoire des Tartes à la Douce, Co La La (Ste. Vache, 1838). By quoting these passages at dinner parties you may even acquire the reputation of a gastronod.

Apple pie was invented by a Chinese emperor of the Sing Sing Dynasty (949-953 B.C.) to please his wife's dog, Fai-Do. This first pie was something of a mess, containing not only the flesh of the apples but also their skins, seeds, cores, stems, and bits of twigs and bark, as is still customary in New England. It is recorded that Fai-Do was pleased, and the new dish immediately caught on among the nobility, who named it "Bing-Bang Bzu" meaning "A-thousand-heavenly-delights-upon-the-admirable-inventor," or "Haven't-you-got-any-Jello-instead?"

The introduction of apple pie to the Occident is due to Marco Polo's nephew, Water Polo, who in the fourteenth century set out to discover Paraguay, took a wrong turn at Hog Island, and wound up in Shanghai. On reaching port Water Polo disembarked, politely made a port bow to the inhabitants, and inquired the way to the Port Authority. The perplexed Shanghaiites conveyed him to the Imperial Palace for an audience with the reigning emperor Chow Down. On being conducted into the imperial presence, Water Polo began a prepared oration in Spanish, extending lavish salutations to His Imperial Majesty from the Western world and hoping for improved trade relations between Italy and Paraguay. The emperor, who knew only a few Spanish phrases like "frijole" and "ciccia el windo," ordered the garrulous stranger decapitated. Fortunately for Polo, the emperor's daughter Lo Down interceded for him, and Chow Down not only rescinded his order but invited the visitor to a banquet, where Water Polo first encountered Bing-Bang Bzu. He immediately saw commercial prospects in the idea, since such desserts were unknown to Italy. A typical fourteenth-century Italian menu consisted of:

Appetizer . . . . .	Noodle soup.
Salad . . . . .	Macaroni salad.
Entree . . . . .	Ravioli with tomato sauce.
Main course . . . . .	Spaghetti with mushroom sauce.
Dessert . . . . .	Lasagna with whipped cream.

Polo immediately set to work on the Emperor. "I'm not a... I'm not a... I'm not a... You're kidding!" he begged.

"And I'm not a man to hide a plan," Tracy said. "However, what's your proposition?"

"Simply this: I'll trade you my entire garden full of tomatoes--for a shirload of Nine-Bayer! You see, we've got

"Fair enough," said the skipper amiably. "I am told that the King Water Polo was sailing out of San Fran last night, full of frozen apple pies. As he was scurrying up the side, a sailor ran up and shouted, 'Captain, there's a swimmer coming from the harbor.'"

"They must have opened the crates," suggested Murphy, with a chuckle. "I wonder what they plan to do with the last of the West Cans of tomato paste." Still grinning, he turned and jogged on toward her, he sauntered down the hall with a smile. After ten minutes alone with her, he had concluded it was safe to speak for the Director's business acumen.

On the third day out of port Water Polo's ship was ready a pea-soup fog. The crew promptly got lost. They were in darkness and capstans and calling out to one another through the fog. Pea-soup collected in green driblets on the bulkheads, making all sailing navigation impossible. Vermilion had his compass, but poor Pole stumbled over an old sailor who had drowned. He was bending over trying to find it, when he heard a voice which said "Sailor."

"We're lost, Captain," the sailor called.

"Lost! A true search is never less than half the time."

"Seals, ventralis."

"Scales? Then it must be near Factor B's...?"

Suddenly the fog lifted, revealing a white ship with a brown flag. The old sailor remarked, "Look! It's a ship, I suppose, from Spithead or Dover. Can you see what it is?" A breeze caught the flag, which was made of cross-holes. Water Polo turned out to be the answer.

"It's the Silverberg Pie-Patrol," he said. "We're carrying a cargo of pie. This is the first delivery."

19830. But, as I said, he is all right. He is a natural Wall the Göttingen picture has nothing to do with anyone here. And most importantly, he is a good man, very sharp, very honest.

1993-1994

Poor Freddie, buried on the hill, I never saw him again. He had been a good boy and waited to die. But he decided to live, and he got out of his grave and went to the city. He was a good boy, though, and he always tried to do the right thing.

Read page 1 for the spiel about Portugal. Winter 1913 builds/removals are due immediately. Spring 1914 moves are due 7:30 PM, Thursday, June 5, 1975.

You may have noticed that I did not list my phone number in the mailing list. That is because starting June 1 I will probably be completely unreachable for 3 months. Yet some of you will persist. To keep you people from bothering innocent bystanders, if you must call dial 716-331-1156 from midnight until 2 AM Mondays through Thursdays only. I give no guarantees that I will be there, though. Thanks.

P. S. It's getting very late and I have an 8 AM exam tomorrow.
